From The Fathers....One Is Essence, Not Relation.

[We must understand] that the Father is not anything in respect to his own substance. We must also understand that what is said about him - that he is the Father and his very existence as Father - is all said in the relation to the Son. How then can the Son be of the same essence as the Father, seeing that the Father - in respect to himself — is neither his own essence, nor does he exist at all in respect to himself? Rather, even his very essence exists in relation to the Son. But this establisher even more the fact that [the Son] is of one and the same essence [with the Father], since the Father and Son must be of one and the same essence, seeing that the Father has being itself - not in respect to himself, but to the Son. This is the essence he begot, and the essence by which he is whatever he is. Therefore neither [person] exists in respect to himself alone. And both exist in relationship to one another.
